ABOUT ANTRANEISE

Antraneise Jackson, DrPH, MPH, serves as Director of Florida's Rural Health Transformation Program (RHTP) at the Agency for Health Care Administration, where she leads implementation of one of the nation's most ambitious rural health initiatives.

In this role, she oversees efforts to strengthen healthcare access, advance innovation, invest in workforce development, and build sustainable models of care for rural communities across Florida. Dr. Jackson led development of Florida's RHTP application, resulting in a $209.9 million federal award to support rural healthcare transformation throughout the state. She has guided the program from concept to implementation, bringing together healthcare organizations, community partners, and public-sector stakeholders to advance initiatives focused on preventive care, care in the home, workforce development, technology-enabled services, and value-based care. A public health leader with extensive experience in healthcare policy, program development, and implementation, Dr. Jackson is committed to building partnerships that improve health outcomes and bring quality care closer to home for rural Floridians. Her work focuses on creating sustainable, community-centered solutions that strengthen healthcare delivery across Florida's rural communities.
