ABOUT JANEEN

Janeen M. Blythe, DPT, ATC, GCS is a physical therapist, educator, and clinical research professional at the University of Florida College of Public Health and Health Professions.

As a Clinical Research Coordinator in the Department of Physical Therapy, she supports research designed to improve health outcomes, advance evidence-based practice, and address real-world challenges affecting diverse populations. She also serves as associate faculty, teaching health promotion, wellness, disease prevention, and therapeutic exercise within the University of Florida's Doctor of Physical Therapy program. A board-certified geriatric physical therapy specialist, Dr. Blythe brings experience across multiple clinical settings, including orthopedic, sports, and older adult rehabilitation. Her research interests include musculoskeletal health, workforce well-being, and practical strategies to prevent and manage low back pain among agricultural and horticultural workers. Known for her commitment to translating research into meaningful community impact, Dr. Blythe works at the intersection of clinical care, education, and implementation science, helping prepare future healthcare professionals while advancing innovative approaches that improve health and quality of life for working populations.
